In DC now for a while walking around doing a little scouting and.. it seems to be a big party atmosphere among Trump supporters. Everyone in a good mood.

I am worried this will all be for nothing if people don't actually get angry. Maybe it's just the initial euphoria of realizing you are not alone and crazy.

We can't accept half measures on this. We aren't doing this every 4 fucking years. We need to end this shit this week.

On the plus side I think turnout is going to be great!

Timing is important. It is very difficult to sustain rage, but when rage is necessary, nothing else will do.

I've been praying for those unfortunate Congress critters who may be torn to pieces. Every time I do I get a vision of Louie Gohmert playing whack a mole on his colleagues with a bourbon bottle. I'm not much for prophetic stuff, but one can hope. Please Lord, protect Louie and keep his bottle of Old Crow from breaking, as we'll all need it to toast 1776.

I was in a 48 hour firefight following an ambush one time. It is absolutely draining to try to sustain something like that. Adrenaline takes you far but once that dumo is over, that's it. We finally got back to the FOB and we slept for like 2 days. No reason to blow your load 2 days early.

I agree, righteous anger is directed and purposeful compared to the anarchic fury of BLM and antifa. Patriotism is higher energy and spreads slower but it lasts. Rage is a wildfire that burns itself out.

You're absolutely correct. That's why they keep pushing back the clock. Once they get you out of DC peacefully after the 6th for some fuckall "audit" that's it. They know it's unlikely to get those numbers back again. People have put their lives on hold and spent tons of money. We have families and work to contend with. They want to exhaust us. Politicians know this and they know they are safe from prosecution or ever facing judgement.

Perhaps this is what you need to have:

<https://theconservativetreehouse.com/2016/10/24/cold-anger-the-corporate-u-s-media-has-weaponized-against-us/>

Read the article if you want to know what is driving a significant number of us.

Most of us Patriots have it. We understand all to well. However, we will not allow raw emotions to cloud our vision, upend our plans.

What is spoken within that article is called "Cold Anger".

Those people smiling and having a good time like at a party? Much like an abused spouse having a great time with friends before going home to their abuser and saying good-bye in a long prepared plan of action.

The party atmosphere is an illusion. What is gathering in DC is a giant powder keg. Should the globalists be stupid about it...they will arrogantly spark it off.

If wiser heads prevail, the anger gets channeled into constructive means.

▲ 15 ▼

– blurryface 15 points 8 hours ago +19 / -4

Weve been winning since November 8th 2016.

And we won again November 3rd 2020

Not by being angry but by letting antifa rage out and change peoples minds.

How exactly do you suggest people "be angry"? Should they say "I'm angry" repeatedly? Possibly grimace? Complain about everything that is bothering them?

And where should they direct this anger? The Trump supporters around them? The ones they came with? Start a mosh pit? The police? Storm congress now and cause chaos? When the President said to be outside at 9 am?

You have no idea how people feel. Just how they're acting.

Sounds like you're around a bunch of stable minded adults who know how to manage their emotions.

Not seeing the problem. You should change your perspective. You sound like an angsty teenager who thinks they're deep and I think you're better than that.

permalink parent save report block reply.

▲ 16 ▼

– gnostic357 16 points 8 hours ago +17 / -1

Exactly.

Another way to look at it - the boxer doesn't start throwing punches two days before he gets in the ring.

All is fine right now. Patriots should be happy to be there joining up with each other. How could you not be pleased to be around thousands of other Trump supporters?

If they weren't pissed, they wouldn't even be there.

People just got there, are happy they made it and are taking a breather. As more folks begin to fill in, people will begin to converse and the moods will change especially as the evening rolls on. People are just happy now to see they are not alone and are among other patriotic Americans. That will change when louder voices start mixing it up.

I know it's fun to fantasize about stuff, but if you actually want to accomplish anything you are first going to need a group of people that have a hierarchy and a plan... A mob will wither away if the first shots ring out leaving you exposed without recourse.

Good luck, be smart.

Waaay to early to get your adrenaline flowing. There will be plenty of time for that. When POTUS gets up and speaks or people start feeling a little fear and anger from Antifa. The mood of a crowd can go from party to violence very quickly.

Speaking from experience my advice to you right now is to stay relaxed as possible and keep you mind focused on real and practical things in front of you. Enjoy the company you are in and try to make some new friends. If your anxiety is overwhelming and you can't shake it, find someone to help in someway. That always works.

Right now, patriots making friends, forming bonds and otherwise connecting is very important. This is the perfect time to do that.

I can feel the same energy as you, here. However, in my mind that will all go away very quickly and turn to rage once the police/antifa begin their tactics to divide and the swamp begins swamping.

Remind them they're paying taxes into a government that appoints Presidents and representatives.

They no longer have a vote (if they ever did - this has been going on for years, perhaps decades).

If this fake election stands, there is no representative government in the United States.

The MAGA movement has got to expand beyond Trump and beyond the Republican Party. Violence on the 6th won't help our cause. Unpopular opinion I know.

It's only an unpopular opinion on this site thankfully. This place, as big as it's gotten, doesn't represent the majority of MAGA in every opinion. There won't be any major violence on the 6th because people don't want that, and Trump doesn't want that.

Before a large battle or operation you sometimes see the frontline guys cracking jokes and shooting the shit. Doesn't mean they aren't about to raise hell shortly.

Don't worry, the fake news will take care of that.

They've already written their reports on the violence and destruction being wrought in DC, they're just waiting to print them.

I am wondering how many "peaceful protest" piece will be written..my guess is 0.

News flash Trump supporters love their country. Burning shit down and getting mad for no reason is something invading forces do. We clean up our trash when we leave an area, and we USED TO THANK the police.
